OF GENERAL INTEREST.

—Professor Mosely has discovered a mollusk which has 11,000 eyes.—Boston Herald.

—The first shipment of seal skins by rail from San Francisco to New York was made the other day. It consisted of fourteen car loads.—Chicago Times.

—The Crockett Steel Works, at Pittsburg, can turn out in an emergency an ingot of steel weighing 13,200 pounds at one heat.—Pittsburgh Post.

—It is a serious thing to wear a cork leg. If you ever fall into the water it is sure to drown you by holding the wrong end up, as it did a Virginia man.—Chicago Times.

—A seat in the New York Stock Exchange recently sold for $21,000, which is the lowest price in five years, the highest price ever paid being $35,500.—New York Sun.

—The city of St. Johns, Newfoundland, has got a lively stable, the first in its history, with four horses and three single wagons, and the people are greatly elated over the novelty.

—St. Vitus' dance is said to have yielded in every case recently treated by a Baltimore physician, who prescribes a wine-pleasant three times daily for a month of a tea made of a herb called skullcap.—Baltimore Sun.

—A Vermont man thought he was inspired to kill Mrs. Adams, a school-teacher, but after she had knocked him down with a club and battered his body for ten minutes, he concluded that it was whiskey instead of inspiration.—Rutland Herald.

—Custer County, Montana, has a creek named Hanging Woman, which, with two other creeks named Starved to Death and Frozen to Death, and Graveyard Bottom, make a combination frightful and desolate enough to drive pilgrims away.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

—The seeds of purslane are but the sixteenth of an inch in diameter, and being flat, no less than 500,000 may occupy a single cubic inch. Dr. Shurtzau's estimate of the seed upon a single exceptionally large plant, placed the number at over 2,000,000.—Prairie Farmer.

—The new pilot-boat Hesper, of Boston, is the largest of her class under the American flag. She is one hundred and four feet long over all, ninety-one feet six inches on the water line in sailing trim, has twenty-two feet extreme breadth of beam, 32 two feet deep, and will draw thirteen feet six inches water aft.—Boston Globe.

—Two Chinamen in Mercer County, Cal., who had agreed to fight a duel to settle some difficulty, worked together all night long to build a coffin. After completing their work they met, armed with revolvers, in a field and one blew the head of the other off. The neighbors who had seen them make the coffin then knew what it was for.

—"It is a great financial blunder," says the Los Angeles (Cal.) Herald, "for the people of Southern California to neglect to open and work the tin mines in our mountains. Thirty million dollars' worth of tin and tin products were imported into the United States last year, and still our mountains, which have vast ledges of tin, are unworked and almost unknown."

—The "little black piper," a colored boy of fourteen years, was taken into the New York Stock Exchange recently while business was in progress and induced to play popular tunes on his fife. He manipulated his shrill instrument with the skill of an old professional, and stirred up the "bulls" and "bears" to a high state of enthusiasm. He raised off a lively Irish jig, which set half a dozen brokers dancing across the floor. When he left he had forty-five dollars in his hat.—N. Y. Mail.

—If Mr. Edward Jackman, of Pittsburg, has a daughter he pictures regrets that she did not elope with his coachman. John Griffith is the driver's name and he has just fallen heir to one million, five hundred thousand dollars in England. He gave up a lucrative situation in Pittsburg to go to England for that paltry sum. There seems to be prizes in the John lottery after all, but blanked few of them.—Detroit Free Press.

—Gertrude Donald, a sixteen-year-old school-girl of Alliance, O., was shot and instantly killed recently by a peculiar accident. While a wagon-load of household goods was passing through the street, a drawer in one of the bureau sets slid out and off the cart. It so happened that a loaded pistol was in it, and the force of the fall to the ground discharged it. Singularly, the ball struck Miss Donald in the back and killed her almost instantly. She lived only long enough to say, "O, I'm shot."—Cleveland Leader.

—All the people in Cayton, from the babes just "feeling their feet" to old men and women, their steps tottering on the brink of the grave, wear gold and silver ornaments. They even invent new places for carrying them and it is no uncommon thing to see a Gipsy belle with the top of her ears covered with gold plate or wire, a large pair of rings pendant from the lobes of the ear, a gold or silver circlet round her hair, or nose adorned with rings, bracelets on her wrists, rings on her fingers and silver plates on her toes.

—A man named Pitney, long notorious in Mendocino County, Cal., as a marauder, was recently arrested for horse stealing. A visit to his haunt in the mountains resulted in turning up one of the largest and most varied collections of plunder ever seen. It included everything, from ladies' underclothing to buggy harness, and from pairs of blankets to a rattlesnake. There were several suits of clothes, overcoats in all colors, sacks of salt, shotguns, grindstones and a hundred other equally incongruous articles.

—The famous scene in "Conn," in which that amusing vagabond comes to life while his wake is in progress, is drawn up the pole with which his mourning mother was drowning her grief, finds a parallel in the case of two Hungarians who were taken up for dead after being struck by an engine on the Jersey Central Road. While the crowd at Drifton, Pa. was waiting a sight of the mangled remains one of them revived and called loudly for beer. They were both taken to a neighboring house, tanned and ducked.—Chicago Times.

—A Great Discovery. Mr. W. W. of New, Iowa, says: "My wife has been seriously afflicted with a cough for twenty-five years, and this spring more severely than ever before. She had used many remedies without relief and being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery, did so, with most gratifying results. The first bottle relieved her very much, and the second bottle has absolutely cured her. She has not had so good health for thirty years. Trial bottles free at Swearingen's & Hubbard's Drug Store. Large size $1.00."—ad

—But no child's shoe except the "Solar Tip," with L. L. Ferriss & Co.'s name on every pair.

The English Laborer.

"The lot of the English laborer is a hard one," says a writer in an English journal. His wages do not average more than twelve shillings a week. He rises before daybreak, breakfasts upon his cup of tea and piece of bread and lard, and sallies forth to plow, a crust and slice of bacon for outdoor dinner rolled in his great red handkerchief. He returns, tired and exhausted, at dusk, and thus his daily bread is gained by a monotony of toil only to be compared with a lifelong tolling of a rosy of millstones. If he faints by the way, or get toward old age, his wages are often reduced, and in some instances he must fall back upon the poor rate. His wife's attention is mainly occupied by home duties—in mending garments, tending the garden and preparing meals. These latter consist of vegetables and bacon, bread, lard and cheese.

The Green Corn Dance Long Ago.
Fifty years ago the Green Corn Festival was a flourishing annual pastime among the Choctaw, Chickasaw and other tribes. It had a religious significance, of course, and was regarded in the light of a New Year's celebration. There was no fixed date for it, but it was summer, just as the corn was ripening, the chiefs sent out an order for the making of new pottery, and a second order naming the day for the opening of the festivities. Runners laden with bundles of small sticks, which they used to burn the corn, were sent out to the various parts of the country. Each bundle had as many sticks as there were days intervening between its receipt and the beginning of the festival. As the days passed the sticks were thrown aside until the last was reached, when preparations were made for the departure to the festival grounds. These were selected remote from any habitation, and near the bank of a stream. Four long houses were constructed in such a manner that they inclosed a large square, entrance to which was had through wide spaces between the houses. Each house opened on this square, which was filled with new earth. The inclosure was for the purpose of no foot touched it until the commencement of the ceremonies. Rude splashes of paint were on the buildings, and from tall poles claws and feathers were displayed. The men and children of the tribe congregated, and early on the date announced the trouble began, as the minstrels were wont to say. Previous to this there had been fasting, and from now on until the close of the festival the men and women live apart.

When the square was ready all the fires in the surrounding town were extinguished, and the houses swept and washed. Runners were sent out to the various parts of the country, and the first of the festival was the burning of the corn. The first ceremony of the festival was lighting the square fire. A square hole was dug in the ground, and a circular hollow was produced, and the ashes of the forest tree or of dry leaves were placed in the hollow. The chiefs then took turns at lighting sticks until a flame was produced. From this flame the fire was lighted to convey fire to their homes. Wood was then heaped up on the original fire in the square, a new pot was brought, and what was called the black drink was brewed. This drink was made of the bark of the live oak tree, and was used to convey fire to their homes.
